We were fortunate to discover Fabu-Wall-ous Solutions at a homebuilders show in Santa Fe. Initially, we were struck by the unique Italian proprietary product technology and rich color palettes they offered. No one else we could find had such an offering. But that was just the beginning as we considered how we were going to transform our ten year old home into something more striking and updated. . .without getting into a major reconstruction job.

Bill Deuschle and Chuck entered into the picture at the outset and literally helped us create an exciting vision to transform our space, where before we just had a vague idea of what was possible. We did know, at minimum, that we wanted the kind of colorful high-polish plastered walls and ceiling effects you see on Parade of Homes tours. . .the kind that take your breath away. They delivered this in spades, but also had other great inventive ideas for us. They were a pleasure to work with and really put us in the middle of a creative process to transform our space. They were such patient listeners and had this customer-gratifying ability to connect the dots between our vague ideas and something that turned into something we (and our house guests) think is remarkable. We've had experiences where the contractor was just that. . .a contractor. These guys do a project as if they are going to live in the place. They are very finicky in terms of aesthetics, they pay incredible attention to detail and they deliver way above what they commit to in terms of quality and without those disappointing extra "cost surprises" that seem to characterize many home improvement projects these days.

During the process, we were also presented some opportunities to improve on the original designs and Fabu-Wall-ous reacted creatively and with great flexibility, something we really appreciated because the end result was a better remodeling project than we could ever imagine. The craftsmanship and execution of the plans was superb, the interpersonal experience with them was terrific, the necessary disruptions to living through a remodel were well managed. We'd joke with friends that when they were finished and no longer daily visitors to our home, it was kind of sad to see them go! We'd trust them in a heartbeat to take on another similarly difficult project. We love the "new" home they've given us.
